HISTORIC "BATTLE OF PROHIBITION ON" AGAIN IN ALL THREE BRANCHES OF THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AT WASHINGTON

Section Three of Amendment Which was Work of President Harding When a Senator, Attacked Before Supreme Court and President is now Urged to Disregard the Palmer Ruling

MAY STRENGTHEN THE VOLSTEAD ACT

Washington, March 22.—The historic "battle of prohibition" which many of the dries believed had been brought to a peaceful end by the Eighteenth Amendment to the Volstead law is breaking out again today with unexpected vigor in all three branches of the government: the legislative, the executive and the judiciary. The developments of the renewed fight are:

In the judiciary section, the supreme court is holding argument in two big attacks on the validity of the prohibition amendment. The ground being that section three, proposed by President Harding when a senator, is unconstitutional because it limits to seven years the time in which states might ratify.

Executive section, the dry forces are besieging the president and attorney general not to put into effect the ruling of former Attorney General Palmer that beer and wine may be made and prescribed in unlimited quantities as medicine. The dry and wet leaders urge appointment of strict and liberal prohibition enforcement officials. Druggists and chemists are meeting here to appeal to Prohibition Commissioner Kramer to withdraw the restrictions on the use of alcohol in making medicine.

The legislative section, more drastic amendments to the Volstead act to prevent any widespread sale of beer as a result of Palmer's ruling being considered. The center of interest in the battle is the unexpected attack on the validity of the Volstead act through the supreme court.

The case is in the hands of a woman, Miss Annette Adams, assistant attorney general, who is now arguing the case in the supreme court.

FIVE MAJOR PROBLEMS FACED BY THE HARDING GOVERNMENT

Washington, March 22.—Five questions demanding solution within the next few weeks faced President Harding and his cabinet today. They included:

First, demands of the railroads for additional government assistance.

Second, the administration's policy toward trade with Russia.

Third, the nature of recommendations to be made to Congress on various subjects.

Fourth, reorganization of the shipping board and revision of the merchant marine.

Fifth, the attitude this government should take on questions to be discussed by ex-Premier Viviani of France, who is enroute here.

CALL FOR EXTRA CONGRESS SESSION

Washington, March 22.—Formal call for the extraordinary session of Congress to meet at noon, April 11, was issued by President Harding today.

MOTHERS OF THIS CITY INTERESTED IN CHILD WELFARE

Mr. L. P. Lee, field secretary is here to interest the mothers of Clearfield in the work of a League which has for its object helping parents train their children physically, morally and intellectually, laying special emphasis on training for social participation. It provides for their welfare by means of a systematic educational and advisory board in the acquisition of definite knowledge and broader culture relating especially to childhood and its needs.

The Child Conservation League is a national organization, incorporated under the laws of District of Columbia and by cooperation with organized community, the League seeks to do the most practical things through enforcement of laws designed to better the condition of man. The president of the League, Dr. Winfield Scott Hurl, is a prominent authority on sex hygiene and a party. On its advisory board are many famous men and women, among whom are: Jane Bowles, President of the Society of Human Relations, Baltimore; H. L. Hunt, President of the National Marksmanship Association; Prof. O. S. Mearns, University of Wisconsin; and Prof. Zerkow, Johns Hopkins University.

Much interest is being shown by the ladies of Clearfield in the good work, and it is hoped that a splendid success of the League may be secured any questions.

MAHAFFEY BUSINESS MAN WINS ATHLETIC HONORS FOR BOSTON

Competing for the Springfield (Mass.) Y. M. C. A. last Saturday night, D. W. Walker won the running high jump and set up a new record for the Boston Y. M. C. A. and also a new mark for the Northeastern section. The bar was set at 5 ft. 11 in. Although the measured height at the center of the bar was shown to be 5-9 3/4. The old record was 5-9 1/2.

Mr. Walker's winning jump was a big surprise to the many College athletes representing various New England universities. Gail Robinson, the famous Boston jumper who had been conceded first place in the high jump, was greatly outclassed, this caused much disappointment to the large Boston crowd who were backing young Robinson. These Boston games were the first Y. M. C. A. Inter-state Competition and good performances were recorded in each event. That Springfield should be represented with the star of the games has caused much sensation and the Western Massachusetts newspapers have paid high tribute to Mr. Walker's achievement. For the Boston victory he was awarded a handsome gold medal. Mr. Walker is well known in Clearfield.

The Beauty Doctor

SUPT. JOHNSTON HERE LOOKING OVER THIRD STREET JOB

Supt. J. K. Johnston, of the Tyrone Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad company was in town yesterday afternoon calling on friends and incidentally transacting a little business for his poor, old, weak, impoverished, running behind railroad. The Superintendent was importuned by the borough authorities to have the paving between the rails on Third street finished. The improvement of this street was begun in May last but if Council waits on the Pennsylvania to finish its share of the work several Mays will have come and gone before the work is completed. Meanwhile the condition of the railroad track is a grave menace to travel on this street.

Supt. Johnston was unable to say when, if ever, the work would be completed, alleging that at present the revenues of the road are not sufficient to pay expenses because of the fact that the road's business is now but 25 per cent. of "normality." The condition of the times, as outlined by Supt. Johnston's wall, noted above, was reflected in the worthy Superintendent's mode or manner of travel. Hitherto when preambulating the branch and "looking his possessions over" Supt. Johnston traveled in his own private car. This trip alas, he traveled in the day coach, like a real common, private citizen. The hardness of the lot of the average railroad "super" and the harrowing plight of the railroads generally (if you believe all you hear) was apparent to all from the T. & C. Superintendent's plight.

While here he borrowed a hatchet and nails from one of the little stores on Third street and tightened up a couple of loose boards on the baggage room near the depot and when he finished that work one of the track hands generously divided the contents of his dinner bucket with him, thus obviating the necessity of going without his dinner or eating "the piece" he very frugally packed before leaving home and carried with him in order to keep down expenses. A friend offered to loan him car fare home, but J. K. said he had been provided with a round trip ticket before he left Tyrone.

Times sure are hard for the railroads. We can prove it by General Chatterbury.

CLARENCE RISHELL'S BODY ARRIVED IN NEW YORK

Ashley Risher was notified by wire last evening that the remains of his son, Clarence Rishell, who gave up his life on a French battlefield in the World War, had arrived in New York and would be sent home for burial just as soon as it was possible to do so.

Mrs. Homer Walker, of Woodland, is a surgical patient in the Clearfield Hospital.

field. Recently he has been a resident of Mahaffey where he has business interests.

FEW CHANGES MADE IN APPOINTMENTS BY M. E. BISHOPS

The Progress has received a consignment of garden and flower seeds from Congressman Jones which will be given free, one package of each, so long as they last, to all comers tomorrow. Please do not ask for more than one package and children under sixteen must present a written request from their parents. Come early as the supply is limited. No mail orders can be received because of the small number of packages.

FRUITFUL SESSION OF COUNCIL HELD LAST EVENING

Fourth Street and Gulch Avenue Paving Project Moving Right Along—Fire Hazards a Topic

WANT DANGER REMOVED

"The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Borough Council at the Borough building was attended by ten of the twelve members and Burgess Burgess Chase, President Pletcher was in the chair and a great deal of important business was transacted. Street Commissioner Graham reported the activities of his street crew during the past two weeks, while Borough Engineer Hess made report on engineering matters, chief of which was Fourth street relief drain. The engineer again recommended that the bare hillsides along Clark street and Cemetery Road, be improved by the planting of some quick growing trees in order that opportunity be given for grasses to grow and sods to develop and thus prevent the loose earth and gravel from washing down into the paved gutters and being carried by the storm waters down onto Market and Fourth streets and into Fourth street drain.

Charles T. Kurtz was present and complained of violation of "fire limits" ordinance, which was being done in the main part of town and at several other points, it was learned.

The Ordinance passed in May last provides against the building, reconstruction or repairing with combustible materials any building in the fire zone in the different sections of the town and the attention of the Burgess was called to the necessity for him having the Ordinance enforced.

E. M. Carr was present and asked to have the sanitary sewer on Walnut street extended from Fourth to Fifth street.

M. O. A. Sghm was present and complained of surface water running in on his property along the Pennsylvania railroad just below Ogden Avenue.

Mr. Rosser, of Highway Department and Chairman Gallaher, of Finance Department stated that funds sufficient to pave South Fourth street and Gulch Avenue could be made available and the Highway Department recommended that both

MARTIN "DRY" ENFORCEMENT MEASURE DEFEATED BY STATE LEGISLATURE BY VOTE OF 105 TO 99 IN THE HOUSE

Harrisburg, March 22.—The Martin prohibition enforcement bill was defeated in the House today, 99 voted in the affirmative and 105 in the negative. We want a strong prohibition enforcement law in Pennsylvania to carry out the provisions of the Volstead law," Martin declared when the bill was called up for vote. "It is not whether prohibition is right or wrong. We are going to enforce the law," Representative Catlin of McKean county stated in discussing the bill. "It is easier to enforce gambling laws than prohibition laws," he said. Representative Davis, of Indiana, a former chairman of the law and order committee, unexpectedly spoke for the measure.

MOTHER HURLS TWO CHILDREN AND SELF FROM FOURTH FLOOR; EXPECTED TO DIE

New York, March 22.—Mrs. Bridget Mulfall and her two children were expected to die today following a fall from a fourth story window to the street. Police allege Mrs. Mulfall threw her children from the window and then jumped from the window. They said she and the children were found in a gas filled home about a month ago. The children are John, aged 1, and Mary Ann, aged 2.

JAPANESE AMBASSADOR DENIES JAPAN IS FORTIFYING ISLAND IN PACIFIC

Washington, March 22.—Denial that Japan is "mobilizing for war" in the Pacific by fortifying her mandate island was made today when Baron Shidehara, Japanese ambassador, in a statement to the United Press. Reports that Japan is fortifying this island is "preposterous," said Shidehara.

JOHN J. ESCH OF WISCONSIN NAMED TO INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION

Washington, March 22.—The following recess appointments were announced in the White House today: John J. Esch, of Wisconsin, to be a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission; D. L. Davis, of St. Louis, to be a member of the War Finance Corporation.

RED CROSS ROOMS VERY ACTIVE PLACE

Clearfield people are beginning to really appreciate the work being done by Clearfield Chapter American Red Cross as is being evidenced by the increased interest in the public nursing service maintained. The headquarters in the Murray building is a busy place as four classes in home hygiene and care of the sick are being held each week with a full attendance at each.

This work is progressing very satisfactorily and much good has already been accomplished.

Little Miss Betty Glover of Fifth street is styled the "most patient" patient at the clinic.

The instructresses in charge are Miss Miller and Miss Smythe.

Everybody is welcome and invited to participate in this movement.

CLEARFIELD COUNTY HAS BIG FIRE LOSS

Harrisburg, Pa., March 21.—The Bureau of Fire Protection has just completed a five years analysis of fire losses in Clearfield county.

When seventy per cent of all fires are shown to be due to neglect or carelessness, the price is beyond all reason.

With the co-operation of the various Fire Chiefs, the Bureau of Fire Protection, by increased number of inspections and removals of hazards, hopes to reduce the losses in 1921 an appreciable extent.

With the idea of protection in view all citizens should immediately co-operate with the fire chief by removing rubbish and debris from premises, remove any hazardous condition and keep properties in as near a fire proof condition as possible.

Fire Losses	Year	State
Clearfield county	1915	$11,793,623
	1916	14,432,132
	1917	17,363,675

GORMAN "MOPPING UP" HOUTZDALE REGION WET SPOTS

Sheriff Gorman and Deputy Gilliland arrived home last evening from their second raid in the Houtzdale region. Their second raid did not produce the quantity of "wet goods" realized on the first haul, as every bootlegger in the game immediately upon hearing of clean-up No. 1 cached his supply of "merchandise" in his private bomb proof where none but he might enter.

Four Houtzdale people are under bail for court as the result of these raids. The little mining town of Moran was given a call yesterday afternoon by the officers while they were in that region. The places of Mike Selchick and Andy Putcha were both pinched. Mike, it was alleged had been selling "third rail", but no contraband goods were found on his premises. Putcha had a quantity of Horke Vino in stock and was also running a punch board or two. He will be called upon to answer a charge of running a gaming house and violation of the liquor law.

HENRY REDDING PASSES AWAY

Henry Redding a well known mine superintendent of Wishaw, Jefferson county, died Saturday morning last following the amputation of a leg, aged 60 years. The deceased was a brother of James Redding, formerly of Clearfield, and Larry Redding, of Snow Shoe, and was well known throughout this entire region.

He is survived by his widow and five children. His funeral occurred this morning from St. Mary's Catholic church, Reynoldsville. Interment at Reynoldsville.

MRS. JOHN KLINE DIES

Mrs. John Kline, a respected and lifelong resident of Lawrence township, died at her home in Mt. Zion Sunday morning last, aged about 65 years.

She is survived by one son and two daughters, as follows: Martin, Effie and Cora.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take a Glass of Salts Before Breakfast If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid, which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and an overall decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism, when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will be relieved. The acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

HOW TO REDUCE VARICOSE VEINS

Many people have become despondent because they have been led to believe that there is no remedy that will reduce swollen veins and lumps. If you will get a two-ounce original bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil (full strength) at any first class drug store and apply it at home as directed which will continue until the miners at Rositer, at which time.

Moore's Emerald Oil is very concentrated and a bottle lasts a long time that's why it is a most inexpensive treatment. It has brought much comfort to worried people all over the country and is one of the wonderful discoveries of recent years and always bear in mind that anyone who is disappointed with its use can have their money refunded. Generous sample on receipt of 15 cents, silver or stamps, International Laboratories, Rochester, N. Y. Your druggist can supply you.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By "Skinney"

Arthur Brisbane, the brilliant and brainy editor of the New York American, says that Americans are shipping hides to Germany. The Germans tan them, do all the work, and keep one quarter of the raw hides for their pay. In other words, it costs Germany less than a quarter of what it costs in the United States. Do you ask about the freight? Do not be so innocent. You can ship a bale of goods from New York to Buenos Aires, on the other side of the Equator, for less than you can ship a bale of goods across New York city from the North to East river.

Behind the organ of a Croatian Sunday school down in Allegheny county, detectives found an illicit still and John Trubak, the sexton, was industriously engaged in drawing off several gallons of liquor when the detectives located the distillery. The detectives were hunting a set of harness that had been stolen from a farmer when they found John and his still. It cost John the still and $100 fine and costs. But wasn't that a heck of a place to look for a set of stolen harness?

It seems that railroad shop rules made it necessary to call in six mechanics, in order to change a nozzle tip in the front end of a locomotive.

One 16 year old boy could have done it alone. A boiler maker and his helper had to open the door, only boiler makers could touch the door of the boiler.

A pipeman and his helper had to remove the blower pipe, that is pipeman's work.

A machinist and his helper had to remove the tip. And the six men had to be used to shut the door and put back the pipe.

This system was built up under government control, partly because the employees of private owners left in charge of the railroads wanted the government control to fail. They encouraged every stupidity.

The thing is mainly due, however, to the folly of workmen, unable to realize that all any workman gets in this world is what some other workman produces, or to realize that when workmen plan to waste their labor or cut down production they attack the prosperity of the entire working class. We cheat ourselves when we think we are cheating others.

No one knows better than the railroad worker what has been done in the last few years to cut down labor's productivity.

Every railroad man has seen the gangs of laborers moving so slowly that you could hardly see them move. Every railroad man knows how earnestly the effort was made to put two men where one could have done the work.

Prosperity for working men can only be attained by every worker doing his full bit. An honest day's work for an honest day's pay. The working man who "soldiers" and thinks that he is cheating his employer is simply "doing" the public and himself and will sooner or later realize this fact.

It is said that a recent "woman evangelist" told her Clearfield audience that if a person joined the church she subscribed to and the husband or wife, as the case might be, of that person refused to join this particular church, then it was the duty of the "convert" to separate from friend, husband or wife. That sure is pretty strenuous and if the same line of reasoning worked out in all Clearfield churches the divorce court officials would sure do a rushing business. Unfortunately there are a great many people in Clearfield, as in other towns in this section, who believe our churches are maintained solely for old people, the women and children.

We've also discovered that for every man who can talk intelligently on "mandates" there are 99 who can't.

The fellow who does the most talking about how little sense the women have isn't thinking about running for office.

The more we reflect on it the more certain we are that heaven is a place where every fellow minds his own business.

A woman may go to church because she has a new hat, but a man generally accompanies her because he's ashamed not to.

All men are not alike. The ones who don't help their wives wash the dishes are usually pretty good at providing son of a gun to put in the dishes.

We hear a great deal these days regarding the high cost of road building and when figuring up this cost the matter of freight rates enter largely into the boosting of the price. Why is it not possible for a big saving to be made in freight and other charges by building Clearfield county roads out of Clearfield county materials? There is no reason why Clearfield county sand and stone cannot stand the most searching honest test of the highway department engineers. The matter is at least worth looking into and as the recent County Good Roads Association went on record as favoring the building of county roads now, the county commissioners might also look into this matter of "home materials" for "home roads."

A SCHOOL SUGGESTION

We are a nation of poor letter writers. We write more than any two nations combined, it's true, but we do it in such a slipshod manner that letter-writing in America has actually become mechanized instead of a science. Now and then we receive a letter which reflects credit on the writer, but more often we get them—and we write them—where they could be greatly improved upon.

We note that in some of the schools of this state teachers are urging their pupils to give especial attention to letter-writing, and we believe it would be a good idea to impress upon the boys and girls of Clearfield and the schools in this neighborhood the advantage of doing likewise. They are taught English and spelling and composition, all of which is necessary and important. But why not, instead of having them write so many compositions, have them write letters too. Give them examples of good business letters, and teach them how to write interesting personal letters. The teacher could put a business letter on the blackboard, and then ask for letters in answer to it. And it would not be long before we would have in this community a citizenship composed of good letter writers.

When the boys and girls now in school get out into the business world, where they will have occasion to write many letters of a business nature, what could be more valuable to them than lessons along this line given them in the course of their regular school studies?

Beeswax Finish.
To try this method of covering the cracks in furniture soften beeswax until the consistency of putty, then press it into the cracks very firmly, smoothing the surface over with a thin knife. The surrounding wood should then be sandedpaper with fine sandpaper, working some of the dust into the beeswax.

Valuable Assistance.
A little girl was watching a surveyor at work near by with great interest. After a time she pined him and timidly asked to help. "Well, now, what could I help you do?" he inquired. "I could help you walk," she answered.

American Shrub Appreciated.
One American shrub which has been received with great appreciation in England, and which grows well there, is the gorgeous flame azalea, called by the botanists azalea canadense. This plant was sent to Europe many years ago and perhaps is not grown so widely now as it has been in the past, owing to the great influx of rhododendrons.

"Lord, son," he said, "you're as thin as a snake. I'll have to feed you up." As they sped toward the landing, he looked Billy over once more. "I have it," he declared. "You need a change of climate to get rid of that malaria. Just show me this little old mining claim of yours, Bill, and then hike for God's country. Three months up there will put you right again, and by the time you get back, we'll be about ready to weigh the first clean-up."

Billy shook his head. "I'd like to mighty well, Jack," he replied, "but I just can't."

"Huh! I suppose you don't think I'm equal to the task of straightening out this concession of yours and making a hummer out of it, eh?"

The young fellow looked across at him sheepishly. "Mine?" he queried. "Who's talking about a mine. I'm thinking of a girl!"

"Oh!"

"Some girl, Johnny."

"I hope she's not some parakeet," Webster muttered. "Have you looked up her pedigree?"

"Ah-h-h!" Billy spat over the side in sheer disgust. "This is an American girl—born here but white—raised in the U. S. A. I've only known her three weeks, but—ah-h!" And Billy kissed his hand into space.

"Well, I'm glad I find you so happy, son. When do you pull off the wedding?"

"Oh," said Billy, "that's premature. Jack. I haven't asked her. How could I until I'm able to support her?"

"Look here, son," Webster replied. "Don't you go to work and be the kind of fool I was. You get married and take a chance. A man ought to marry young, Bill. Hang the odds. I know what's good for you."

At the hotel Billy sent a note to Dolores, apprising her that John Stuart Webster had arrived—and would she be good enough to receive them?

Miss Rucy would be that gracious. She was waiting for them in the veranda just off the patio, outwardly calm but inwardly a fount of conflicting emotions. As they approached she affected not to see them and turning glanced in the opposite direction; nor did she move her head until Billy's voice, speaking at her elbow, said:

"Well, Dolores, here's my old Jack—partner waiting to be introduced. Jack, permit me to present Miss Dolores Rucy."

She turned her face and rose gracefully, marking with secret triumph the light of recognition that leaped to his eyes, hovered there the hundredth part of a second and departed, leaving those keen, quizzical blue orbs appraising her in the most natural manner imaginable. Webster bowed.

"It is a great happiness to meet you, Miss Rucy," he said gravely.

Dolores gave him her hand. "You have doubtless forgotten, Mr. Webster, but I think we have met before."

"Indeed?" John Stuart Webster murmured interestedly. "So stupid of me not to remember. Where did we meet?"

"He has a profound sense of humor," she soliloquized. "He's going to force me into the open. Oh, dear, I'm helpless." Aloud she said: "On the train in Death valley last month, Mr. Webster."

Webster shook his head slowly, as if mystified. "I fear you're mistaken, Miss Rucy. I wasn't on the train in Death valley last month. I was in Denver—so you must have met some other Mr. Webster."

She flushed furiously. "I didn't think I could be mistaken," she answered a trifle coldly.

"It is my misfortune that you were," he replied graciously. "Certainly, had we met at that time, I should not have failed to recognize you now. Somehow, Miss Rucy, I never have any luck."

She was completely outgeneraled, and having the good sense to realize it, submitted gracefully. "He's perfectly horrible!" she told herself, "but at least he can be like a gentleman—and I always did like that kind of man."

So they chatted on the veranda until luncheon was announced and Dolores left them to go to her room.

"Well?" Billy queried the moment she was out of earshot. "What do you think, Johnny?"

"I think," said John Stuart Webster, slowly, "that you're a good picker, Bill. She's my ideal of a fine young woman, and my advice to you is to marry her. If grubstake you, Bill this stuff color is choking me; I wish you'd wait here while I go to my room and rustle up a soft one."

In the privacy of his room John Stuart Webster sat down on his bed and held his head in his hands, for he had just received a blow in the solar plexus and was still groggy. Presently, however, he pulled himself together and approaching the mirror looked long at his weather-beaten countenance.

BUSINESS AND TRADE

Trade News of Local Interest

THE PROBLEM OF READJUSTMENT

From the Monthly Letter of the Alexander Hamilton Institute

From whatever angle the business situation is analyzed the discussion inevitably comes back to the question, How soon will the wages of factory workers, coal miners, and railway employees become equalized with the income of the farmers?

Factory wages in New York state in January were 120 per cent above the pre-war level according to a state commission report; the wages of coal miners are fixed by an agreement continuing until April, 1922, and the U. S. Railway Labor Board shows no ability to adjust railway wages to the trend of the national income.

Cotton and corn are actually below the pre-war level. All of the cotton, grain and live stock in the country, if sold at prevailing farm values, would not procure for the farmers much over one-half the factory products, coal and transportation service which could have been obtained in exchange for a similar amount of crops during the past two years. Freight cars used in moving the crops are bound to return half empty until the prices of the things the farmer buys are brought into balance with the market value of the crops. At present, moreover, only a small part of the proceeds realized from the sale of the crops can be used in the purchase of factory products, because the funds realized must be largely used to pay off overdue debts to local merchants and banks, and the latter in turn must in many cases pay off the eastern manufacturers to whom they are indebted.

Perhaps there is a degree of poetic justice in the situation, for the wage earners in the mines and on the railways suffered keenly from the rise in the cost of living during the war while the rapid rise in food prices and factory products enabled the farmers and factory laborers to indulge in reckless extravagance. The shoe is now pinching the other foot so far as wage schedules of the railways and coal mines are concerned. By virtue of the depression in manufacturing and agriculture, however, employment in "Too old," he murmured, "too old to be dreaming dreams."

He changed to a soft collar, and when he descended to the patio to John Billy once more he was, to all outward appearances, his usual untroubled self, for his was one of those rare natures that can derive a certain comfort from the misery of self—indeed—and in that five minutes alone in his room John Stuart Webster had wrestled with the tragedy of his life and won.

He had resolved to give Billy the right of way on the highway to happiness.

In Mr Webster's own whimsical phraseology, his clock had been fixed on the instant he recognized in the object of his youthful partner's adoration the same winsome woman he had adored in his own secret castle of love. From that precise second Billy's preserve was as safe from encroachment by his friend as would be a bele of Confederate currency in an armistice vault on the three thousand foot level of a water-filled mine.

John Stuart Webster had unanimously resolved upon the course he should have pursued in the first place. He would investigate Billy's mining concession immediately; provided it should prove worth while, he would finance it and put the property on a paying basis; after which he would see to it that the very best doctors in the city of Barroventura should inform Billy, unofficially and in the strictest confidence, that if he desired to preserve the life of Senior Juan Webster he should forthwith pack that rapidly disintegrating person off to a more salubrious climate.

Having made his decision, John Stuart Webster immediately took heart of hope and decided to lead trumps.

Dolores rejoined them for a siesta after luncheon.

Webster leaned over and slapped Billy Gony's knee affectionately.

"Well, Bill, you saffron-colored old wretch, how long do you suppose it will take for you to pick up enough strength and courage to do some active mining? I'm anxious to get this property on a paying basis, so I can get out of the country."

"Why, Johnny," the amazed Billy declared, "I thought you would stay and help run the mine."

"Indeed?" Well, why do you suppose I spent so much time teaching you how to run a mine, you young idiot, if not against just such a time as this? You found this concession and hid it up. I'll finance it and help you get everything started, but after that, I'm through and you can manage it on salary and make the salary yours! You have a greater interest in this country than I, William, and so with your kind permission we'll hike up to that concession tomorrow."

FARM WOODLOTS ARE EASILY OVERLOOKED

Firewood Ranks Sixth in Value as Farm Crop.

Power-Driven Log Saw Supplants Crosscut and Buck, Making Task of Cutting Easy and Pleasant—Easy to Move About.

While farmers have watched the prices of corn, wheat, live stock and other farm products go down, down, down, many of them may have overlooked the one farm commodity that has not only held up in price, but which is in great demand and which offers splendid cash profits right now when they are needed most. This crop is firewood and it is just ripe for "picking." Right now is the time for farmers to harvest their firewood! Although neglected by many, statistics show firewood to be the sixth farm crop in value, being headed only by corn, wheat, cotton, hay and oats.

If this were still the age of the crosscut and the bucksaw, this suggestion of sawing wood for profit would be regarded as too suggestive of backache and blistered hands. But in these modern times the power-driven log saw—a machine light in weight, easily moved and dependable—has come to supplant the crosscut and bucksaw for firewood, and to make the once hardest of all farm jobs an easy and pleasant task. With such a machine as is now on the market, the farmer can even the ready cash he must have to keep things going while congress, bankers and others debate over his and the nation's problems.

In a utilitarian sense, timber unused is timber useless to mankind. Trees are a vegetable crop, and like others of their kind, they grow to maturity, decay and die—a total loss unless they are harvested and converted to the uses for which they are best adapted.

On nearly every farm in West sections of the country there is timber in more than sufficient quantities for home use. There are live trees that need to be taken out to give room for younger ones to grow, or to clear the land for cultivation; there are dead trees that are allowed to fall and decay, and on thousands of farms the banks of rivers and creeks are lined with logs and other driftwood.

The old way of hauling logs to a saw mill made timber work impracticable as well as unprofitable. But now that there are log saws that can be wheeled like a harrow almost anywhere and can be operated on rough, marshy, brush-covered ground, wood can be cut by machinery into easily handled lengths and sold at the high prices that such fuel is now bringing. The present situation with wheat, corn and other crop products at an unprofitable level, has caused many farmers to go after these timber profits they have been overlooking.

morrow and give it the double-O; then, if I can O. K. the property, we'll cable for the machinery I ordered just before I left Denver, and get busy. We ought to have our first clean-up within ninety days."

"Gosh, but you're in a hurry," Billy murmured. He disliked exceedingly the thought of having his courtship interrupted on a minute's notice.

"You know me, son, I'm a hustler on the job," Webster reminded him bluntly; "so the sooner you start, the sooner you can get back and accumulate more malaria. What accommodations have you up there?"

"None, Jack."

"Then you had better get some Billy. I think you told me we have to take horses at San Miguel de Padua to ride in to the mine." Billy nodded. "Then you had better buy a tent and bedding for both of us, ship the stuff up to San Miguel de Padua, go up with it and engage horses, a good cook, and a couple of reliable muzzos. When you have everything ready telegraph me and I'll come up."

"Why can't you come up with me?" Billy demanded.

"I have to see a man, and write some letters and send a cablegram and wait for an answer. I may have to loaf around here for two or three days. By the way, what did you do for that friend I sent to you with the letter of introduction?"

"Exactly what you told me to do Johnny."

"Where is he now?"

"At El Buen Amigo—the same place where I'm living."

"All right. When you get back to your hotel, you might tell my friend I shall expect him over to dine with me this evening. If he can manage it."

For an hour they discussed various subjects; then Billy, declaring the siesta was almost over and the shops reopening as a consequence, announced his intention of doing his shopping, said good-bye to Dolores and Webster, and lugubriously departed on the business in hand.

"Why are you in such a hurry, Mr. Webster?" Dolores demanded. "You haven't been in Buenaventura six hours until you've managed to make me perfectly miserable."

"I'm terribly sorry. I didn't mean to."

"Didn't you know Billy Geary is my personal property?"

"No, but I suspected he might be. Billy's generous that way. He never hesitates to give himself to a charming woman."

"This was a case of mutual self-defense. Billy hasn't any standing socially, you know. When old Mrs. General Maldonado lectured me (the dear, aristocratic soul conceived it to be her duty) on the impropriety of appearing on the Malecon with Billy and my guardian, who happens to be Billy's landlady, I tried to explain our American brand of democracy, but failed. So I haven't been invited anywhere since, and life would have been very dull without Billy. He has been a dear—and you have taken him away."

Webster laughed. "Well, be patient, Miss Ruey, and I'll give him back to you with considerable more money than he will require for your joint comfort. Billy in financial distress is a joy forever, but Billy in a top hat and a frock coat on the sunny side of Easy street will be absolutely irresistible."

"He's a darling. Ever since my arrival he has dedicated his life to keeping me amused," she rose. "Despite your wickedness, Mr. Webster, I am going to be good to you. Billy and I always have five o'clock tea here in the veranda. Would you care to come to my tea-party?"

"Nothing could give me greater pleasure," he assured her.

She nodded brightly to him. "I'm going to run up to my room and put some powder on my nose," she explained.

"But you'll return before five o'clock?" Webster was amazed to hear himself plead.

"You do not deserve such consideration, but I'll come back in about twenty minutes," she answered and left him.

As Webster viewed the situation, his decision to see as little as possible of Dolores during his brief stay in Sobrante was a wise one. The less he saw of her (he told himself), the better for his peace of mind, for he was forty years old, and he had never loved before. For him this fever that burned in his blood, this delicious agony that thrilled in his heart—and all on the very ghost of provocation—were so many danger-signals, heralds of that grand passion which, coming to a man of forty, generally lasts him the remainder of his natural existence.

Webster was forced to admit he was afraid of himself. His was the rapidly disappearing code of the old unfeathered West, that a man shall never betray his friend in thought, word, or deed. To John Stuart Webster any crime against friendship was the most heinous in all the calendar of human frailty; even to dream of slipping into Billy's shoes now would be monstrous; yet Webster knew he could not afford a test of strength between his ancient friendship for Billy and the masculine desire for a perfect mate. Remained then but one course:

"I must run like a road-runner," was the way Webster expressed it.

fore Webster roused from his bitter introspection sufficiently to glance at his watch. "Hum-m-m!" he grunted disapprovingly.

"Oh, I've been here fully half an hour," Dolores' voice assured him. He turned guiltily and found her leaning against the jamb in a doorway behind him and farther down the veranda. She was gazing at him with that calm, impersonal yet vitally interested glance that had so captivated him the first time he saw her. "Are you quite finished talking to yourself and fighting imaginary enemies? If so, you might talk to me for a change; I'll even disagree with you on any subject, if opposition will make you any happier."

He rose and indicated the chair. "Please sit down, Miss Ruey. You are altogether disconcerting—too confoundedly smart. I fear I'm going to be afraid of you until I know you better."

She shrugged adorably and took the proffered chair. "That's the Latin in her—that shrug," Webster thought. "I wonder what other mixtures go to make up that perfect whole."

Aloud he said: "So you wanted to study me in repose? Why waste your time? I am never in repose."

"Feminine curiosity, Mr. Webster. Billy has talked so much of you that I wanted to see if you measured up to the specifications. Just let me have your hand, and I'll tell you all about yourself."

"Is there any charge?"

"Yes, a nominal one. However, I guarantee a truthful reading; if, when I am through, you are not wholly satisfied, you do not have to pay the price. Is that a satisfactory arrangement?"

"Right as a fox," he declared, and held out his great calloused hand. He thrilled as she took it in both of hers, so soft and beautiful, and flattened it out, palm upward, on her knee. "A fine, large, useful hand," she commented musingly. "The callouses indicate recent hard manual toil with a pick and shovel; despite your recent efforts with soap and brush and pumice-stone, there still remain evidence of some foreign matter ingrained in those callous spots. This line indicates that you are very brave, gentle, and courteous. You are quick and firm in your decisions, but not always right, because your actions are governed by your heart instead of your head. Once you have made a decision, you are reckless of the consequences. Your lifeline tells me you are close to fifty-three years of age."

"Sober, you're shooting high and to the right," he interrupted, for he did not relish that jab about his age. "I'll have you know I was forty years old last month, and that I can still do a hundred yards in twelve seconds flat—in my working clothes."

"Well, don't feel peeved about it, Mr. Webster. I am not infallible; the best you can hope for from me is a high percentage of hits, even if I did shoot high and to the right that time. In point of worldly experience you're a hundred and six years old but I lopped off fifty per cent, to be on the safe side. To continue. You are of an extremely chivalrous nature—particularly toward young ladies traveling without chaperons; you are kind, affectionate, generous to a fault, something of a spendthrift. One may safely depend upon you to do the unexpected. Your matrimonial line is unbroken, proving you have never married, although right here the line is somewhat dim and frayed." She looked up at him suddenly. "You haven't been in love, have you?" she queried with childlike insouciance. "In love—and disappointed?"

He nodded, for he could not trust himself to speak.

"How sad!" she cooed sympathetically. "Did she marry another, or did she die?"

"She—she—yes, she died."

"Caution! tongue, in all probability, carried her off, poor thing! However, to your fortune: You are naturally truthful and would not make a deliberate misstatement of fact unless you had a very potent reason for it. You have a strong sense of sportsmanship, and when fairly defeated, whether in a battle of fists or a battle of wits, you never hold a grudge, which is one of the very nicest characteristics a man can have."

"Or a woman," he suggested feebly. "Quite right. Few women have a sense of sportsmanship. You stand a

FRUITFUL SESSION
OF COUNCIL HELD

streets be paved. After considerable discussion the recommendation of the Highway Department was unanimously adopted and the Borough Engineer was directed to proceed at once to prepare his grade maps, etc. for the paving. The Borough Solicitor was also directed to prepare Ordinance providing for the paving of these streets.

These streets will be paved with reinforced concrete. Fourth street paving will extend from Cherry street across Leavy avenue, 1500 ft. in length and will cost approximately $11,000. Gulch avenue extends from West Market street to the Lawrence township line a distance of between 700 and 800 feet and the paving is estimated to cost about $7000.

T. J. Norris was present and protested against the paving of the alley ending from Market to Cherry street between First and Second, but was told the decision to pave same had been made at previous meeting.

An ordinance providing for the paving of this alley was then unanimously passed. Solicitor Urey reported that he had taken up with State Highway Department the matter of the use of large chains on the heavy trucks operating on our streets, also that he had asked P. R. R. Co. and N. Y. C. for permission to put Fourth street relief drain under the railroad tracks. He had not heard from the Pennsylvania but the New York Central wants $10 for preparing an agreement and an annual rental for such sewer crossing or permit.

The condition of Third street was again up for discussion and Mr. Urey stated that he had taken the matter up with Supt. Johnston of the Pennsylvania who appeared to be unable to make any promises in the matter. He then presented a notice to the Pennsylvania to the effect that the borough would complete the paving between the tracks and present bill to the company at the completion of the work. The Burgess and Secretary of Council were authorized to sign the notice or offer.

The fire limits Ordinance was then taken up for discussion and the necessity for strictly enforcing the provision for a building permit, in order that the matter might be properly controlled. The Borough Solicitor and Secretary were then directed to prepare form of permit for use, embodying the caption of the Ordinance in order that all desiring to build, reconstruct or repair might be informed of the provisions of the Ordinance and have no excuse for failure to comply therewith.

Resignation of H. S. Brink as patrolman, was read to Council and accepted. The matter of a successor was referred to the Police Committee for a recommendation. The names of W. E. Mathers and W. H. McNeerlin were presented for the vacancy on Council from the Fourth Ward to succeed E. R. Williams, removed from the Ward, and Mr. McNeerlin was elected to serve until Jan. 1, 1921.

The Public Property Committee recommended the purchasing of 600 feet of fire hose and the recommendation was adopted.

RECEPTION FOR NEWLYWEDS

Honoring Mr. and Mrs. Irl Byron Calvin, of New Castle, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. Glen C. Worthington, 254 Crescent Drive entertained with an informal dance and dinner party Saturday evening. The dinner was a post nuptial affair, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin having been recently married. The table appointments were in yellow and white, yellow tulips forming the centerpiece and half concealing a large kewpie from which white streamers led to the kewpie place cards.

Out of town guests included Miss Ruth Ericson, a sister of Mrs. Calvin, Miss LaRue Brewster, Miss Dorothy Powell and Ernest Calvin, all of Cleveland. Covers were laid for ten.—Akron Beacon Journal.

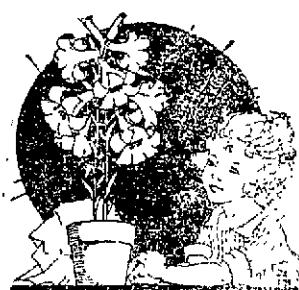

Mrs. Calvin before her marriage, was Miss Lillian Ericson, daughter of Mrs. Anne Ericson, of Clearfield, Pa.

THIS WOMAN SUFFERED

Mrs. H. A. Leaman, Sturgin, Colo., writes: "I suffered with bladder and kidney trouble for years. Doctored and tried everything. No help. Finally a friend sent me Foley Kidney Pills. They helped me so much I used 7 bottles. Now I feel fine. Spent sleepless nights. Suffered so it seemed I hardly could live. Recommended Foley Kidney Pills to all who suffer from kidney trouble as I did." Sold Everywhere.

LAXATIVE For Aged
People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

Webster —Man's Man

very good chance of becoming a millionaire in Sobrante, but you must beware of a dark man who has crossed your path."

"Which one?" Webster queried mirthfully. "All coms look alike to me—Greasers also."

"Mere patter of our profession, Mr. Webster," she admitted, "tossed in to build up the mystery element and simulate wisdom. Fortune awaited you in the United States, but you put it behind you, at the call of friendship, for a fortune in Sobrante. Now you have reconsidered that foolish action and at this moment you are contemplating sending a cablegram to a fat old man who waddles when he walks, recalling your decision not to accept a certain proposition of a business nature. However, you are too late. The fat old man with the waddle has made other arrangements, and if you want to make money, you'll remain in Sobrante. I think that is all, Mr. Webster."

He was gazing at her with an expression composed of equal parts of awe, amazement, consternation, adoration, and blank stupidity.

"Well," she queried innocently, "to quote Billy's colloquial style: did I put it over?"

"Did I Put It Over?"

"You did very well for an amateur, but I'm a doubting Thomas. About this fat old man who waddles when he walks: a really topnotch painter could tell me his name."

"Well, I'm only an amateur, but still I think I might, to quote Billy again, make a stab at it. Do you care to bet me about ten dollars I cannot give you the fat party's initials—all three of them?"

He gazed at her owlishly. She was the most perfectly amazing girl he had ever met; he was certain she would win the ten dollars from him, but then it was worth ten dollars to know for a certainty whether she was perfect or possessed of a slight flaw; so he silently drew forth a wallet that would have choked a cow and skinned off a ten-dollar gold certificate of the United States of America.

"I'm game," he mumbled.

"The fat gentleman's initials are B. P. J."

"By the twelve apostles, Peter, Simon—"

"Don't blaspheme, Mr. Webster."

He stood up and shook himself.

"When you order the tea," he said very distinctly, "please have mine cold. I need a brace after that. Take the ten. You've won it."

"Thanks, ever so much," she answered in a matter-of-fact tone, and tucked the bill inside her shirtwaist.

"I am a very poor woman, and—"

"Every little bit added to what you've got makes just a little bit more," she caroled, swaying her lithe, beautiful body and snapping her fingers like a cabaret dancer.

He could have groaned with the futility of his overwhelming desire for her; it even occurred to him what a shame it was to waste a marvel like her on a callow young pup like Billy, who had fought so many deadly skirmishes with Don Cupid that a post-impressionistic painting of the Gray heart must resemble a pin cushion. Then he remembered that this was an ungenerous, a traitorous thought, and that he had not paid the lady her fee. "Well, what's the tariff?" he asked. "You really feel that I have earned a professional's fee?"

"Beyond a doubt."

"Since you have taken Billy away from me this evening, I shall make you take Billy's place this evening. After dinner you shall hire an open victoria with two little white horses and drive me around the Malecon. There is a band concert to-night."

"If it's the last act of my wicked life," he promised fervently. Strange to relate, in that ecstatic moment no thought of Billy Geary marred the perfect serenity of what promised to be the most perfectly serene night in history.

They were seated at the tiny tea table when the sound of feet crunching the little shell-paved path through the patio caused Webster and Dolores to turn their heads simultaneously. Coming toward them was an individual who wore upon a head of flaming red a disreputable, conical-crowned straw sombrero; a soiled cotton camisa with the tails flowing free of his equally soiled khaki trousers, and sandals of the kind known as alpagates—made from the tough fibre of a plant of the cactus family and worn only by the very lowliest peons—completed his singular attire.

"One of Billy's friends and another reason why he has no social standing," Dolores whispered. "I believe he's going to speak to us."

Such evidently appeared to be the man's intention. He came to the edge of the veranda, swept his ruin of a hat from his head and bowed with Castilian expansiveness.

"Verardon, Miss, for appearin' before you."

She smiled her forgiveness to what Webster now perceived to be an alcoholic wreck. He was about to dismiss the fellow with scant ceremony, when Dolores, with that rich sense of almost masculine humor—a humor that was distinctly American—said sweetly:

"Mr. Webster, shake hands with Don Juan Cafeteria, bon vivant and man about town. Don Juan, permit me to present Mr. Webster, from somewhere in the United States. Mr. Webster is a mining partner of our mutual friend Mr. William Geary."

A long, sad descent into the pit had, however, imbued Don Juan with a sense of his degradation; he was in the presence of a superior, and he acknowledged the introduction with a respectful inclination of his head.

"Tis you I've called to see, Mister Webster, sor," he explained.

"Very well, old-timer. In what way can I be of service to you?"

"Tis the other way around, sor, if ye please, an' for that same there's no charge, seem' ye're the partner, av that line, kind gentleman, Mister Geary. Did ye whilst in New Orleans, have d'alin's wit' a short, shout spagoty wit' a pucker'd ear under his right eye?"

John Stuart Webster suddenly sat up straight and gazed upon the lost son of Erin with grave interest. "Yes," he replied, "I seem to recall such a man."

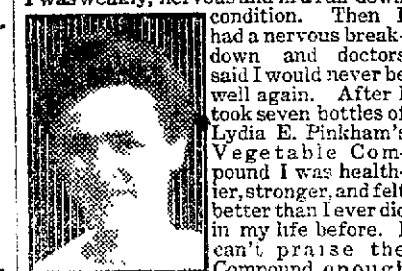

"Tis gone av me business, sor, but would ye mind tellin' me just what ye did to that spagoty?"

"Why, to begin, last Sunday morning I interrupted this pucker-eyed fellow and a porxy-eyed friend of his while engaged in an attempt to assassinate a white, modish stranger. The following day, at the gangplank of the steamer, we met again, he jolied his

HAD NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Mrs. Ireland Permits us to Publish this Letter for the Benefit of Others Who Are in Her Condition

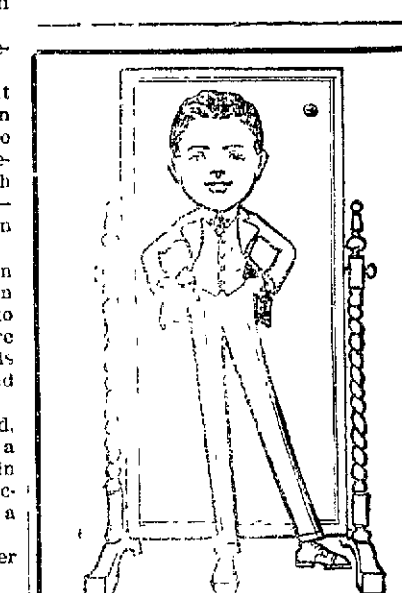

Warsaw, Missouri.—"For five years I was weakly, nervous and in a run-down condition. Then I had a nervous breakdown and doctors said I would never be well again. After I took seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I am stronger and feel better than I ever did in my life before. I can't praise the Compound enough and will recommend it to all women. You may publish this letter if you think it will help others."—Mrs. FLOYD IRELAND, R. R. 1, Warsaw, Missouri.

Nervous women are both ailing and wretched, and with a nervous breakdown all joy goes out of a woman's life. It is said that the ill peculiar to women act on the nerves like a firebrand.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming such conditions, a large number of American women who were once great sufferers from nerve troubles owe their present health and comfort to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

nose into my business, so I squeezed his nose until he cried; right before everybody I did it, Don Juan, and to add insult to injury, I plucked a few hairs from his rat's moustache—one hair per each pluck."

"I'd a notion ye did somethin' to him, sor. Now, thin, listen to me: I'm not much to look at, but I'm white, I'm an attachay, as ye might say, av Leary Leher—him that do have the import an' export house at the end av the Calle San Rosam, forinst the bay. Also he do have charge av the cable office, an' when I'm sober enough, I deliver cablegrams for Leher. Now, then, ye'll recall we had a bit av a shower to-day at noon?"

Dolores and Webster nodded. Don Juan, after glancing cautiously around lowered his voice and continued: "I was deliverin' a cablegram for Leher, an' me course took me past the palace gate—which, be the same token, has sinthry-boxes both inside an' out, wan on each side av the gate. The sinthry was not visible as I came along, an' what wit' the shower comin' as suddint as that, an' me wit' a wardrobe that's not so extensive I can afford to get it wet, I shepped into wan av the outside sinthry-boxes till the rain should be over, an' what wit' a drink av aguardiente I'd took to brace me for the thip, an the munny av and times, I tell a-shen
